Handbook of Teaching and Learning in Sociology

Edited by Sergio A. Cabrera, with Stephen Sweet, Ithaca College, US

'Sergio Cabrera and Stephen Sweet's Handbook of Teaching and Learning in Sociology offers a wealth of information about effective teaching from both established and rising voices in the discipline. While essential for those new to teaching sociology, anyone seeking to invigorate their courses will find an abundance of ideas here. An invaluable resource for SoTL scholars in sociology and related fields.'

How to do Action Research for Transformations

At a Time of Eco-Social Crisis

Hilary Bradbury, AR+ Action Research Plus Foundation, International

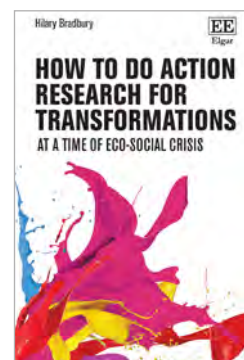

'Hilary Bradbury has made many important contributions to the field of action research over some decades. Yet, I found this book to be her most interesting piece of writing. It is experimental in form and successfully mixes stories of real-world change processes, with auto-biographical reflection and conceptual analysis in a way which really made me think. The book is an erudite and passionate articulation of pathways to action at a time when the world urgently needs to nurture the "proliferating micro worlds" that she describes.'

TEXTBOOK

Advanced Introduction to Social Policy, 2nd edition

Daniel Béland, McGill University and Rianne Mahon, Carleton University, Canada

'Daniel Béland and Rianne Mahon provide advanced students with an excellent overview of systems of social provision and regulation worldwide, notable for its theoretical sophistication and compelling empirical materials. The authors engage with the practical and analytic challenges to welfare states, and their analysts, posed by globalization and global governance, increased migration, transformations in household forms and gender relations, and shifting racial/ethnic dynamics. Moreover, the book is well-grounded in the rich comparative traditions of welfare studies while also attending to innovative theoretical trends.'

The Role of the Public Sector
Economics and Society

Bent Greve, Roskilde University,
Denmark

'Recent years have witnessed the "Return of the State" after decades of spreading neo-liberalism and market ideology. Bent Greve's book is a very well written text able to capture the old and new roles of the public sector in contemporary societies. It provides interesting and valuable insights both for scholars and students into how the relationship between the state, the market and society has been evolving and the present and future challenges.'

Malcolm Torry, University of Bath, London
School of Economics, Basic Income Earth
Network (BIEN) and formerly Citizen's
Basic Income Trust. Priest in the Church of England and Priest in Charge of St Mary
Abchurch, City of London, UK

'The idea of an unconditional basic income is now discussed all over the world and it raises many questions, sociological and political as well as economic and administrative. Some of them are universal, others are country-specific. In the process of identifying the most important unanswered questions, Malcolm Torry provides a lucid, splendidly informed overview of what we currently know about the many versions of basic income and their likely effects.'

A Research Agenda for Gentrification

Edited by Winifred Curran, DePaul
University, Chicago, US and Leslie Kern,
Mount Allison University, Canada

'Recognising gentrification is ultimately a process that displaces the poor and marginal. This Research Agenda argues that it is not enough to simply diagnose the geographies of gentrification, but that we need to prescribe solutions. Showing that grounded knowledge of gentrification's intersection with class, race and sexuality can help inform strategies of resistance, this is an internationally-relevant book which flags exciting new directions in gentrification scholarship and activism.'

NEW IN PAPERBACK Cost-Benefit Analysis and Dementia

New Interventions

Robert J. Brent, Fordham University, New York, US

'The book offers a fascinating paradigm to reflect upon dementia interventions, promising to widen the lens of interested governments, public health and policy makers, as well as clinicians alike. By interlinking concepts of protecting human rights, preventing elder abuse, caring for persons living with dementia, all contributing to improving global health and economy, this book offers a solid rationale for an international United Nations convention on the human rights for older persons.'

Work and Employment Relations in Southern Europe

The Impact of De-regulation, Organizational Change and Social Fragmentation on Worker Representation and Action

Edited by Carlos J. Fernández Rodríguez, Universidad Autónoma de Madrid, Spain and Miguel Martínez Lucio, University of Manchester, UK

'This is an important and timely book. The immediate effects of the 2008 financial crisis on the economies of Southern Europe are well documented, but the longer term consequences on industrial relations are less well understood. This edited collection presents a wide ranging exploration of the effects of crisis on employment emphasising in particular changes to the collective regulation of work. An important overview of the complex and changing dynamics of these key economies.'

Forced Migration, Gender and Wellbeing

The Long-Term Effects of Displacement on Women

Edited by Selma Porobić, Palacky University Olomouc, Czech Republic and University College London and Brad K. Blitz, University College London, UK

'Forced Migration, Gender and Wellbeing is a brave and much-needed study of the long term effects of the violent breakup of Yugoslavia in 1992. In the intervening years there are no longer any refugees, only unresolved traumatic experiences, problems of identity and self esteem and issues with gender equality. This is a much-needed work on understanding how the lived experience of violence and displacement impacted the wellbeing of men and women alike in Kosovo, Bosnia, and Serbia.'

A Research Agenda for Leadership Learning and Development through Higher Education

Edited by Susan R. Komives, University of Maryland and Julie E. Owen, George Mason University, US

'Stressing the importance of understanding context, Susan Komives and Julie Owen provide leadership researchers a foundation for addressing the critical questions of not only what to study, using what method, but to what end does their research practice matter? Thus, this book works to make a crucial research shift in leadership studies through higher education towards a more equitable and justice-oriented approach, as authors collectively outline challenges, tensions, and possibilities for a more liberatory leadership.'
