Research Handbook on Climate Change and Biodiversity Law

Edited by Phillipa C. McCormack, The University of Adelaide, Australia and Richard Caddell, Cardiff University, UK

'Climate change and biodiversity loss are the twinned threats to sustainable futures for human and nonhuman communities. Yet nearly all laws addressing these problems treat them as unrelated. This volume shows the essential links between these problems, and proposes visionary, synergistic reforms for a livable, bountiful planetary future. Indispensable.'

The Tokenised Economy and the Law

Riccardo de Caria, University of Turin, Italy

'This new book is a much needed addition to the literature given the rise of digital assets. The regulation of tokens is examined through the traditional lenses of currency, property, contract, corporate, and investment or securities law. De Caria does an excellent job of providing a taxonomy of tokens and how they are viewed at legislative, regulatory and academic levels. The taxonomies discussed in The Tokenised Economy and the Law provide a framework to begin thinking about the intersection of sovereignty and regulation with present and future digital markets.'

Elgar Studies in International Family Law

TEXTBOOKAdvanced Introduction to International Tax Law*Third Edition

Reuven S. Avi-Yonah, University of Michigan, US

'The new edition of Avi-Yonah's Advanced Introduction to International Tax Law is a compact and accessible guide to the field. In effect, he has given us two books in one. The first is a very useful general guide to the basics of the rules and how they work in practice, with illuminating international comparisons to the often distinctive US rules. The second is a clear and spirited defense of Avi-Yonah's particular views about international tax policy. These do not attract consensus in the field – nor do anyone else's views – but they can help stimulate further thinking about these complicated and important issues.'

– Daniel Shaviro, New York University, US

Key Features:

- Defines the main principles of jurisdiction and how they apply to tax
- Critically analyses both inbound and outbound taxation, on both passive and active income
- Discusses transfer pricing, a variant of source-based taxation that lies at the heart of modern efforts to tax corporations at source

Hate Crimes in Comparative Legal Perspective

Edited by Jon-Mirena Landa Gorostiza, Enara Garro Carrera, Mikel Anderez Belategi and Iñigo Gordon Benito, University of the Basque Country (UPV/EHU), Spain

'This book goes some way towards filling an odd lacuna in the hate crime literature, pulling together as it does scholarship on the emerging developments and debates on the hate crime canon across Europe. It features analyses of disparate nations and allows for the identification of both parallel and distinct approaches to the phenomenon. Hate Crimes in Comparative Legal Perspective lays a strong foundation for ongoing comparative analyses.'

EU Pensions Law*A Commentary and Practitioner's Guide

Edited by Philip Bennett, Durham University, UK and Hans van Meerten, University of Utrecht, the Netherlands

'For those who would like to know more about the IORP II Directive and its operation, this is an interesting book. Certainly the relationship with UK law is plainly fascinating and this even after Brexit. Moreover, the authors make a very interesting and readable comparison between the first IORP Directive and the second IORP Directive. The reader gets an historical legal insight into the evolution between the two Directives.'

– Yves Stevens, University of Leuven, Belgium

Key Features:

- Examines the impact of EU state aid law on pensions
- Discusses the meaning of the 'prudent person rule' in Article 19 of the IORP II Directive
- Provides a detailed article-by-article analysis of the IORP II Directive, in comparison to the relevant articles of the IORP I Directive
- Considers how EU pensions law has been retained in the UK post-Brexit and the effect of the UK Retained EU Law (Revocation and Reform) Act 2023

Research Handbook on EU Competition Law and the Energy Transition

Edited by Leigh Hancher, University of Tilburg, the Netherlands, FSR/RSCAS/EUI, Florence, Italy and University of Bergen, Norway and Ignacio Herrera Anchustegui, University of Bergen, Norway

'This book is an important addition to the existing literature on sustainability and competition law for three reasons. Firstly, transition to low carbon energy is the single most important aspect of the fight against climate change. Secondly, it shows how competition policy can (and must) complement regulation. Thirdly, it explores not only well developed areas like sustainability agreements and competition law, but also underdeveloped areas such as the role merger control and the law on abuse of dominance and state aid can play in the energy transition.'

The Conceptual Structure of EU Competition Law

Restrictive Agreements

Csongor István Nagy, University of Galway, Ireland; University of Szeged and HUNREN Center for Social Sciences, Hungary

'The book draws extensively on U.S. antitrust law to develop a conceptual framework for evaluating restrictive agreements under EU competition law. Of particular interest is the author's discussion of the various pigeonholes that are used in evaluating restrictive agreements under Section 1 of the U.S. Sherman Act, including "the per se rule" and rule of reason and various hybrids such as the "quick look." Readers will be particularly interested in the author's distinction between the "quick look" and the "abbreviated rule of reason."

Good Faith in Contract Law

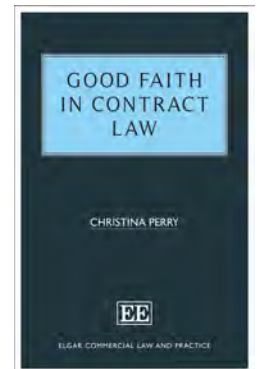

Christina Perry, Queen Mary University of London, UK

'The elusive concept of good faith has an increasingly important, but controversial, role in English contract law. This book provides a detailed and comprehensive overview of express and implied duties of good faith, as well as the Braganza duty of rationality. Importantly, it also provides a very valuable comparative analysis of duties of good faith in other common and civil law jurisdictions.'

– Peter Church, Linklaters LLP, UK

Key Features:

- Compares various areas of the law which are not often studied together
- Provides in-depth evaluation of recent case law in relation to good faith in commercial contracts
- Discusses the obligation to exercise contractual discretion in good faith, following the leading case of Braganza v BP Shipping Ltd [2015]
- Assesses the treatment of good faith in contracts in common law jurisdictions such as the United States, and in civil law jurisdictions such as France and Germany

Gender, Sexuality and Law

A Textbook

Edited by Chris Ashford, Northumbria University and Alexander Maine, City St George's, University of London, UK

'A textbook about gender and sexuality is welcome and long overdue. Uncompromising in its radical perspectives and wide ranging and accessible, this ground-breaking textbook brings together theoretical rigour with grounded practical applications and demonstrates the centrality of gender and sexuality to debates in family and criminal law, civil liberties and human rights. A key text for any law student interested in understanding and seeking tools and methods for thinking rigorously about law and social change.'

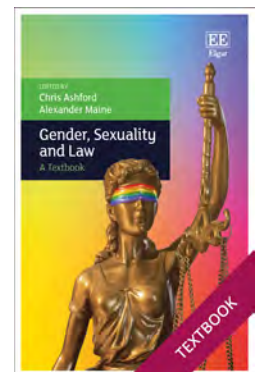

– Daniel Monk, Birkbeck, University of London, UK

Key Features:

- Inclusion of feminist and queer judgments and statutes linked to gender and sexuality
- Accessible and detailed discussion of feminist and queer theory, and critical race theory
- Discussion of the decriminalisation of homosexuality, consent and sexual violence, hate crime, sex work and pornography
- Exploration of trans identities, relationship recognition rights, parenthood and reproduction, pregnancy and abortion, gender and the legal profession, and identities and employment

Intellectual Property Approach or Unfair Competition Approach?

Minyu Zheng, Kempinski AG and Max Planck Institute for Innovation and Competition, Munich, Germany

'Commentators have long registered concerns about overenforcement of intellectual property rights and the proliferation of trolls and sham litigation. Comparing the laws in China, Germany, the United Kingdom and the United States and drawing insights from the Paris Convention, this book explores the appropriate balance between protecting intellectual property rights and safeguarding freedom of competition. It also critically examines the important yet oft-overlooked question of when enforcing these rights will amount to unfair competition. A rare contribution to a timely and practical problem!'
